Sharon Gamba say's Craven's Pay Raise Refusal is an Election Gimmick

North Kingstown, RI July 21, 2014

Sharon Gamba, Republican candidate for State Representative in District 32, today characterized Robert Craven's promoting his refusal of the 1.5% legislative pay raise as an election gimmick.

"We all know it's election season when the political insiders like Bob Craven try to distract voters from the dismal record of failure and scandals," said Gamba. "As a business woman, I see things from the big picture prospective. When a career politician like Craven gives up a small 1.5% pay raise and makes an announcement about it, it raises red flags for all voters."

State Representative Robert Craven announced recently the he would not take the pay increase given to state legislators.

"I agree he should not accept a pay raise based on such poor performance," said Gamba. "However, does my opponent really think the voters of North Kingston are impressed by meaningless trinkets of false contrition? After increasing spending over $1 billion dollars in the last two legislative sessions and overseeing scandals like 38 Studios, voters will not be distracted from the real issues in this campaign."

Sharon Gamba is running for State Representative in District 32.
